

The Cornell Lab  of Ornithology

Why so many fences?

This forest supports ongoing research investigating the impact of deer on plant species. These fences allow us to control which areas are grazed by deer. So far, we've discovered that deer prefer to eat native plant species, increasing the amount of invasive plants and decreasing opportunities for native animals who rely on native plants.

